

Table of Contents

List of Abbreviations

Introduction

Chapter 1

1.1 Definitions

1.2 Accounts and classification

1.3 Determinants

1.4 Temporal trends and geographical allocation

1.5 Stability and cyclical development

1.6 Expected effects of FDI on growth

1.6.1 FDI and growth: theoretical models

1.6.2 FDI and growth: empirical evidences

1.6.2.1 Micro level

1.6.2.2 Meso level

1.6.2.3 Macro level

1.7 Possible drawbacks of FDI

1.8 Evolution of FDI-related policies

1.9 Conclusions

Chapter 2

2.1 What is inequality and how it is measured

2.1.1 Inequality: of what?

2.1.2 Inequality: among whom?

2.1.3 Inequality: measured how?

2.2 Why income inequality matters

2.2.1 Ethical reasons

2.2.2 Social reasons

2.2.3 Economic reasons

2.2.3.1 From growth to inequality

2.2.3.2 From inequality to growth

2.3 Inequality trends

Chapter 3

3.1 Inequality and short-term capital flows

3.2 Inequality and trade liberalization: the Heckscher-Ohlin model

3.3 Inequality and FDI

3.3.1 The Feenstra-Hanson model

3.3.2 Reasons for increasing skill-demand due to FDI

3.3.3 From skill-demand to skill-premium

3.3.4 FDI-related policies to contain inequality increase

3.3.4.1 Demand-side policies

3.3.4.1 Supply-side policies

3.3.5 Empirical Evidences

3.4 Conclusions

Chapter 4

4.1 The dataset

4.2 Descriptive statistics

4.3 The model

4.4 Remarks and conclusions

Chapter 5

5.1 Ghanaian economic history and liberalization policies

5.2 State of Ghanaian economy

5.2.1 Growth, inflation and Balance of Payment

5.2.2 Sectoral performance

5.2.2.1 Agriculture

5.2.2.2 Industry

5.2.2.3 Service

5.3 Social Aspects

5.3.1 Employment

5.3.2 Health and education

5.3.3 Poverty

5.3.4 Inequality

5.3.4.1 Determinants of inequality

5.3.4.2 Regional, rural/urban and gender inequalities

5.3.4.3 Income and consumption inequality

5.4 FDI in Ghana

5.4.1 Previous findings

5.4.2 Features and trends

5.4.2.1 UNCTAD: total FDI stocks and flows (1970-2011)

5.4.2.2 GIPC: new investment registered and employment creation

5.4.2.3 BoG: sectoral allocation of FDEI

5.5 Conclusions

Conclusions

References

Appendix A

Appendix B

Acknowledgments