

INDEX

Introduction:	1
1. Community Organizing
1.1 What is community organizing?	7
1.2 Saul Alinsky and his legacy.....	11
1.3 Post-Alinsky Community Organizing	18
1.4 Community organizing in the world.....	29
2. Research Methodology
2.1 The notion of qualitative research.....	37
2.2 Case study #1: Community Organizing Pilot Project in the northern periphery of Turin
2.2.1 Research design	40
2.2.2 Participant observation
2.2.3 Positionality, reflexivity, and ethical concerns	41
2.2.4 Limitations	42
2.3 Case study #2: Land for people and not for profit: Organizing Cissie Gool House (CGH)
2.3.1 Research design	43
2.3.2 Participant observation	44
2.3.3 Positionality, reflexivity, and ethical concerns.....	45
2.3.4 Limitations.....	46
3. Community Organizing Pilot Project in the northern periphery of Turin
3.1 Introduction to the context: Northern Turin and Barriera di Milano.....	49
3.2 Community Organizing to Northern Turin:	57
3.2.3 What does the case study want to tell? Some Key aspects form the data analysis	66
3.2.4 Make it clearer: Limits and potentials of community organizing to northern Turin.....	80
4. Land for people and not for profit: Organizing Cissie Gool House (CGH)
4.1 Against Colonialism and Apartheid: A South African tradition of organizing	87
4.2 Introduction to the context: Western Cape and Woodstock suburb	95
4.3 Organizing Cissie Gool House (CGH)	104
4.3.1 Fieldwork and data analysis: some key aspects of the case study	119
4.3.2 Toward the conclusions: potential and limits	125
5. Organizing communities to rethink “the world as it is”	128
Conclusions	141
Bibliography	148
Sitography	157
Acknowledgments.....	163